

Annual Conference on Cancer 2026

Collaborative Care Across the Advanced Cancer Continuum

(March 20, 2026)

Provided by Crossroads4Hope & Rutgers Health

Target Audience

This activity is designed for interprofessional healthcare providers and community-based professionals—including professional counselors, social workers, psychologists, nurses, community support staff, patient navigators, public health professionals, educators, and advocates, as well as patients and their families, to support individuals and families impacted by advanced cancer.

Learning Objectives

After participating in Annual Conference on Cancer 2026: Collaborative Care Across the Advanced Cancer Continuum, participants should be better able to:

- Apply national, evidence-based survivorship and supportive care standards to improve care for individuals with advanced cancer.
- Conduct routine, comprehensive assessments of unmet needs among individuals with advanced or metastatic cancer.
- Strengthen interdisciplinary coordination and integrated care planning to enhance collaboration across oncology, palliative care, psychosocial services and care system navigation.
- Improve communication and shared decision-making practices through person-centered engagement techniques.
- Develop and utilize coordinated survivorship and supportive care plans that address long term physical, emotional, psychosocial, and financial needs identified among people living with advanced cancer.
- Strengthen interprofessional communication skills that support care coordination in advanced cancer.
